GENERAL MICHAEL FLYNN, DIRECTOR OF THE DEFENSE INTELLIGENCE AGENCY UNDER PRESIDENT OBAMA AND NATIONAL SECURITY ADVISOR UNDER PRESIDENT TRUMP, IS CALLING FOR MARTIAL LAW AND NEW ELECTIONS
Don't underestimate the importance of this. If someone of Flynn's stature is saying this out loud you can bet your ass more or saying and thinking it in private. Buckle up.

Needs to be there at least as a threat otherwise they will use every single dirty trick in the book to fuck Trump out of it. They have so many options at their disposal. They could promise every Republican rep. who votes for Biden a massive, ungodly bribe. They could threaten them. They could activate military agents of their own. They could do shit we could never predict. They own the media. They dominate the courts. They dominate big business. They dominate the universities. They are literally holding every single fucking card in the deck except the population, the police and the military. If Flynn's path is not at the very least used as a threat the entire world is about to fall into darkness. It'll be even worse than you think.

Except they push their theory in the mainstream. I remember reading dueling articles about the election in Defense One, an extremely reputable, mainstream military news site, a few weeks before the election. The one by democrats argued that if Trump doesn't leave by January 20th the JCOS should order his troops to remove him from the white house by force and answer to Biden. The article by the Republicans argued that the military should not intervene under any circumstances and that the JCOS has no authority to command anyone to do anything. Frustrating to see what they're allowed to publicly state and get away with, but maybe there's something to be said for keeping your cards close. After all, only one thing is really certain right now: no one actually has any idea what the fuck Trump is gonna do.

Well, by all appearances they aren't going to "follow the constitution" unless the military intervenes. The vast majority of them are either enemies, corrupt or cowards. This is the price of moral decay, generation after generation. And having "limited martial law" is impossible in practical terms. If the military has the power to override the courts (including the supreme court) to hold a new election and censor the media ("You must also act, like Lincoln did, to silence the destructive media's one-sided propaganda designed and proven to influence the election outcome, and end the unlawful censorship of Big Tech, to restore the confidence of the American People in our electoral process or we cannot continue as a nation," as the article states) that is full-on martial law. It'd only be limited insofar as it is limited by the people who are in charge of imposing it, which is up to them, whoever they are.

>Martial law is the imposition of direct military control of normal civil functions or suspension of civil law by a government, especially in response to a temporary emergency where civil forces are overwhelmed, or in an occupied territory.
It means what you think it means. The regional governors will have direct control over their territories. The military, will rule directly. The powers of the courts and elected officials will be superseded. Legality and illegality will be decided by whoever commands the military. Their power would be limited only by their own willingness to relinquish it. Admittedly a dark road to have to go down, but at this point military rule would absolutely be preferable to whatever the hell you want to call this system - definitely not democracy. Hope it happens up here too.

Hysterical hyperbole, that's just military rule in its worst form, kind of like how you have to text the government to get permission to leave your house right now in Liberal Democratic European Union Member States France and Greece. Military rule just means the military makes the rules, it doesn't mean the rules have to be particularly onerous. In fact, in most military and autocratic governments throughout history you're pretty much free to do most things except undermine the regime. I guarantee that you would have felt freer in Brazil between 1964 and 1985 than in Canada today.

LOL he didn't. Obama fired him for giving intelligence to the German military, who then gave it to Assad, who then used it to kill the moderate head choppers being funded by the State Department and CIA. Once he got into office, Obama's people immediately fabricated probable cause for an investigation, and then fabricated process crimes.

All government operations are suspended, from dog catcher up including police. Military takes over and runs it, many rights and privilege are suspended. The only courts active are military. It could be really good or really bad depends on how much corruption is in the top brass of the military.

In historical terms it would be like the Romans suspending the senate and appointing a dictator, there's a chance for either Julius Caesar (takes control and doesn't give it up) or Lucius Quinctius Cincinnatus (did what was needed and returned control back, many statues of George Washington symbolize this with him offering a scroll or sword pic related in Baltimore)

That ended. The type of tyranny we're facing now from these globalists will continue as long as they think they can get away with it. We haven't seen the worst of this yet. Look at Europe. Look at California. That and much worse will be the future for all the US and Canada unless something like Flynn's path is at the very least used as a threat. The military may be many things, I'm not saying their rule would be perfect by any means, but I trust them and the police much more than I trust the World Economic Forum, Academia, Big Tech and the Mainstream Media.

If he has tangible evidence of fraud, he's not leaving, and the military aren't going to force him out, as they'll have the evidence too. Then it's up to the Dems and their aligned Federal agencies to decide if they want to concede or have a war against the US military.

If he has nothing, then he'll leave.

Which means that if we reached this point legality would only be relevant insofar as the military thinks that it's relevant. If the US is liberated Canada will be too I think. We're too close and don't have the power to project geopolitical strength at that level. The UK, however, could still slide back into a globalist-controlled EU if things go that way in the US. The Atlantic means that the US could afford to ignore you and you are still a rich, influential, nuclear-armed state. On the other hand, close economic, military, cultural and linguistic ties mean that you could side with the US. My guess is that Brexit being drawn out to this point has less to do with the difficulty of the negotiations and more to do with the fact that your elites want to wait and see how the situation in the US plays out before they make their final decision.

When you create power, that's a magnetic for sociopathic monsters. It would only make things worse.

We're fast approaching the breaking point. The professional rioters and "activists" might get scared away from the homes of politicians when they're surrounded by cops. What happens when the centrists and right get pissed to have an urgent meeting on the front lawn of a wannabe tyrant? Open and concealed carry are ubiquitous in their protests. Hell, you even have some mad lads who go to them with .50 BMG rifles that weigh 30+lbs.
Do you understand why I'm concerned?

I get the sentiment but when push comes to shove its the military who decide and, despite its acceleration into meme land I doubt the majority of the all American families with cross generational sacrifices for "America" will be told it was all actually for the rothschilds thanks fuck off whilst we take your country now.

It comes down to what you're ready to die for, and a lot of people will die to prevent their friends and fathers and uncles deaths to date having been for nothing.

Rudy is hard as nails, I doubt he'd have any problem going in this direction. I think he's playing good cop to Powell/Flynn/Wood's bad cop. Rudy is an olive branch. Rudy represents the possibility that this will be decided at the supreme court and there will be a smooth transition to a second Trump term. But to make that possible you need the martial law plan to scare the fuck out of them. This is why I think Tucker (who, however based he may be, definitely glows) criticized Powell's evidence but not Rudy's despite the fact that it's all more or less on the same level of credibility.

Yeah, I can see that. I’d love to know what’s going on in the background. My fear is that Trump is just unwilling to go “there” as he has shown insane restraint over the last four years. He has never crossed the line even though he has been given dozens of opportunities to do so. Is knowing that not just he and his family’s liberty is at stake but the future of America altogether enough to push him over the line?

As a general rule I find it useful to keep this in mind: the people who actually make the decisions

(and advise the people who make the decisions) on issues like world order, geopolitics, the future of humanity, control of the US military, are not stupid. Trump, for example, is either extremely competent or he is being controlled utterly by people who are, otherwise he wouldn't be in the position he's in. The stuff the public gets, especially through TV but even through highbrow publications, is a distorted reflection of a distorted reflection of a distorted reflection of what's actually happening. My suspicion is that Trump is being controlled by other forces who chose him precisely because he is viewed as bizarre and erratic and therefore unpredictable.

As much as I'd love to see Trump go big dick and cross the Rubicon, unless he's put in the work to build up a defacto secondary shadow government as some people seem to think, he just simply does not have the support structure in our current government to engage in a full-on takeover. Nearly every federal body, including the DoD and Trump's own administration, are compromised as all fuck and he's been almost completely prevented from putting true loyalists into power.

He's pretty much had to resort to slipping through a couple sleepers (like Flynn, who got forced out anyway) or picking from people that have already been approved by the swamp. It does look like he's starting to make some major moves in the DoD ala >>294306475, the appointment of Chris Miller, the change-up regarding special operations, etc., but it might be too little, too late. Obviously, he has the support of half of the public and likely the combat/special operations side of the US military, but everything else is against him, and he doesn't really have a way to wrest control of the current power structure the way most dictators would.

A fact that the media has been hiding for a very long time, is that the US is nowhere close to 50/50 democrat/republican. They have long led you to believe that, but Donald Trump has the support of 86% of the people.
Without dominion/diebold/sequoia/... cheating, Trump won 47 States popular vote.

Could argue, as some have, that he's trying to fuck up US foreign policy as much as possible on his way out the door - leave Biden with wars in Iran, Ukraine and South China sea simultaneously, stiff like that. I don't believe it, however, because it relies on this ridiculous image of Trump as a comic book supervillain to make any sense. Also, if he brings down the US empire on the way out the door and then hands things over to Biden, he is absolutely going to prison at the very least (he probably is already). The only explanation that makes sense is to use the military to stay. My suspicion (and hope) is that this will come in the form of war with Iran followed by a short, decisive conflict in the US.

What a load of horseshit. Firstly, Nick Rekieta of Rekieta Law has already legally opined on the fact that there is no right to vote. There’s only a right that should a vote be permitted; it must be equal in that nobody else’s vote is worth less than anybody else’s vote.

You’re seeking the following remedy as part of a do-over election:
>COVID-19 restrictions (masks & 6-feet)
This is why you’re in the mess in the fucking first place! Instead, demand that everybody attending the election count must sign a waiver to forfeit their rights to safety from the ongoing pandemic. Elections are too important.
>Both parties to watch the vote under military supervision
What about independents? Also, counting should be done in casinos where there are cameras covering every table; have these made to stream online. With military presence to keep tabs on the “supervisors” things should run smoothly.
>Paper ballots…
You never talked about mail-in voting—this should be mail-by-request only. I would further argue that it should be the military that hand-delivers and receives these ballots.

I might reword OPs entire essay to make it less shit later before I hit a word limit.

There are two methods to consider. Full martial law, and the insurrection act. Martial Law can be declared by the President with the approval of Congress. This is done in cases where the court system is no longer functional. Law is handled by the military and its tribunals. It would be an interesting legal challenge to make if, say, the courts were packed with traitors.

The other method is through the insurrection act. The necessary conditions for this are the inability for local officials to maintain order, or if a region is undergoing some form of insurgency.

This is a global crisis disguised as a dispute over a US election. That's why leafs like me are paying such close attention. The US is in the unique, paradoxical, extremely ironic position of being the most powerful Empire in world history while having an ethos that is still fundamentally opposed to imperialism, conquest and basically all forms of subjugation and exploitation. In any other Empire Australia, the UK, Canada, Argentina, Japan, Germany, Ukraine, Israel and Iraq would be considered provinces, not fully autonomous entities. The flip side of Empire is that the imperial provinces start to have a real interest in who runs your government, hence why war in the middle east might coincide with the ultimate election outcome.

Ideal situation would be military rule coinciding with a return to relative normalcy. Keep the right websites and news outlets shut down, produce and encourage positive, optimistic media, get covid out of the news, quietly arrest certain people, break up any physical resistance quickly without allowing reports of it to spread in the news or online, get rid of all covid restrictions, let small businesses flourish. After a few weeks present evidence of the globalists' crimes to the people (there will be a lot of it). Then have new elections with impeccable security and transparency so that every person can have absolute confidence in their vote. This would be the ideal way for things to play out. Might not satisfy your desire for revenge, but in terms of pure realpolitik this would be close to the best option.

I agree. I do not necessarily want revenge on the every day leftists. To me they are simple drones of the ruling class. Nothing more. But there are people, big names, who are absolutely deserving of a firing squad and I would like these people to see this kind of end. I also think that the elimination of a not that many, 5th column actors would make good enough substitute for anything else. Their is a house of cards, remove key cards and the house falls. Now this is kind of what McCarthy tried to do and he failed because of how massive that operation was already so I don't know if this is the best way to go about it. Being communist is still technically illegal in the US but this kind of laws are stupid and prevent nothing. Basically what I'm worried about it seeing Pinochet and McCarthy ways of cleaning the country up from the undesirable elements I think that they didn't go far enough and rhe commie/authoritarian menace came back, so this kind of thing would only prolong the time of normalcy, but would not eliminate the threat completely.

redoing the election is the only option if people actually want there to be unity.

if the dems refuse, then fuck em, make their lives hell.
all i wish is for the dems to be humiliated out of their minds.
maybe then they can be saved. right now, theyre stuck so far up their own asses that they dont give a shit about anyone else. unity on their terms isnt unity, its subservience.

That's exactly what will happen. The system as it stands is so deeply ingrained in the minds of the primary wealth holders (boomers) that they've conjured up this good vs. evil biblical final battle scenario where good prevails. This shit happened a hundred times in human history. Eventually corruption begins overriding the system, and it's rejected. What we see isn't some big ploy, it's the desperation of an ailing empire in its death throes.

Well, that's my point. If he was going to seize control, the time to have started building up his network was a long time ago.

However, if I wanted to make an argument in his favor, I would say that he might have had these people primed to be swapped in case something like this happened--doing ballsy moves too early would have been too obvious and would have probably gotten him JFK'd. Seeing as he's effectively been denied the power to make fresh appointments, he's also had to spend the past few years zeroing in on who the loyal people already within the system are, since those people don't need to get the approval of Congress. All things considered, he might not have ever wanted to do something as bold as seize power in the first place, but with the fraud of the election, his hand will have been forced.

The world would greatly benefit in the short term from a rightwing dictator running America for 3-4 years. The problem is the long term. If Trump doesn't step down in a timely manner, there would inevitably someone much worse later down the line who would take advantage of the restricted rights of citizens. Regardless Trump would be remembered as a villain for all time despite more or less saving the republic and in fact the entire free world by proxy.

McInerney also called for martial law. I think it's becoming clear the democrats aren't going to allow the republicans to flip this, and republicans are too weak or too corrupt in their hawkishness to want to flip this. They are trying to shut down the election fraud case on technicalities. Trump will be betrayed at every turn and they won't allow this to go to SCOTUS, and even if it does we only have four guaranteed anti-Biden votes.
